

Aviation

---

Airports are an integral part of economic development. However, they are faced with numerous business pressures, statutory requirements, and other governmental regulations that make operating an airport unique. The Chambliss Aviation team understands the particular challenges and opportunities that airports regularly face. We have experience in matters relating to general business and corporate matters, including labor and employment, regulatory and policy matters, government affairs, construction, real estate, leasing land, and airport space, contract development and negotiations, litigation, and public-private infrastructure development. Our background in highly regulated environments coupled with robust business and operational insight makes us a go-to resource for airports and aviation businesses.

The burdens and demands placed on airports can be overwhelming. They are always balancing the need to drive revenue while addressing issues like security and competition. Finding partners like Chambliss that understand the barrage of pressures is essential. Our team helps navigate through the layers of law and regulation and solve problems so the client can concentrate on operating the many different elements of the airport business.

Related Services

- Business
- Construction and Design
- Cybersecurity and Data Privacy
- General Counsel

Related People

- Stephen D. “Steve” Barham
- Kirby Waddell Yost
- Drew M. Ellis
- Alexander B. Blankers