

Manufacturing

Faced with a myriad of regulatory and operating challenges, manufacturers have to focus on more than producing goods. They must understand legal and regulatory issues affecting the way they do business. Clients in the manufacturing industry trust Chambliss for its multidisciplinary and pragmatic counsel.

Emerging companies to well-established domestic and international manufacturers seek the advice of Chambliss attorneys. Drawing upon interrelated practice areas and a comprehensive understanding of clients' businesses, industry insights, and trends, our team can offer solutions from everyday legal needs to more complex, bet-the-company matters. We assist on the front end with site selection, financing and incentives, and business planning. We also support our manufacturing clients throughout the lifecycle of the business with issues relating to corporate governance, general corporate and compliance issues, real estate, labor and employment, intellectual property, mergers and acquisitions, litigation, and environmental and regulatory matters. Our team concentrates on minimizing risk so the business leaders can capitalize on opportunities.

We build strong strategic partnerships with our clients. We take great pride in knowing that several of our manufacturing clients began as small businesses and are now major international companies. Our depth of experience and extensive deal knowledge allow us to serve domestic and international manufacturing companies across a wide range of industry sectors, including:

- Agriculture
- Automotive and transportation
- Chemicals
