Clients know I'm responsive, pragmatic, and honest about the situation. Looking at the big picture, I understand what they have on the line and will take a strategic, cost-efficient approach.

Cathy Dorvil is a fearless litigator for health care and commercial clients across the U.S. Her previous careers in occupational therapy and health program management have given her a perspective that many health care litigators do not have. She can speak the language of her clients including medical providers, billing companies, Medicaid managed care organizations, insurance companies, and home health and community-based care organizations like mental health facilities, nursing homes, and hospices. Health care clients turn to Cathy for counsel on disputes related to fraud and abuse, Medicaid and Medicare enrollment and payment, vendor and billing contracts, credentialing, payment, personnel, and insurance. Cathy is also an experienced commercial litigator, representing and defending various entities including billboard companies, educational institutions, municipal and government organizations, and nonprofits in complex contractual matters. She handles cases in administrative, state, and federal courts. She quickly gets up to speed in identifying risks and appropriate solutions in the clients' best interests. No matter what is at stake, she will provide her clients with an honest assessment of the cost/benefit analysis of litigation. She regularly speaks nationwide on fraud and abuse and other health care litigation topics and trends.

Sidebar

Before settling down in Chattanooga, Cathy experienced all four corners of the U.S., living in L.A., Seattle, Boston, and Miami. Cathy enjoys spending time with her children and is also an avid outdoors fan. She loves hiking, camping, canoeing, and kayaking with her family. Cathy has three beautiful adopted children – Meola, Melinda, and Brithny. At home, she has the most spoiled rescue bloodhound ever, Jane. Cathy's familial spirit doesn't just stop with her kids. She has been a foster parent for many years and thinks of her former foster children as "her babies." Before practicing law, Cathy spent many years in Haiti as an occupational therapist and then as the director of a health program. She's contributed to amazing health programs in Bangladesh and Guatemala, as well.
