I am personable in nature and easy to talk to. I think our clients appreciate this and my approach to getting the work done.

For well over a decade, Jannine Rowell has worked with estates and assisted in estate and trust planning. Jannine works with both individuals and families as she guides them through each and every step of the process, diligently answering any questions they have. She helps clients meet their goals, whether they are concerned about beneficiary changes or avoiding probate. She drafts a variety of documents, including wills, trusts, incapacity documents, and quitclaim deeds. From day to day, she conducts signing meetings and keeps extensive contact with both clients and financial advisors. She also provides assistance for retitling assets and updating beneficiary designations, striving to ensure that estate plans are properly implemented.

Dealing with estate planning can be a confusing and sometimes emotionally difficult experience, but Jannine is reliable and caring – doing all she can to help her clients achieve peace of mind. Some firms may provide little guidance when it comes to restructuring assets, resulting in unnecessary probate. That's why she goes the extra mile during the planning process to make sure everything possible is taken care of to meet her clients' end of life wishes. Jannine has worked with law firms for over three decades and has served clients throughout Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida.

Sidebar

Jannine has worked in various locations throughout the country and enjoys Tennessee the most. Chicago is her "hometown," but Tennessee, where she has lived the last two decades, is definitely her home. When she's not at the office, Jannine volunteers at her son's school, visits restaurants and breweries in the
