I love finding creative and skillful ways to serve my clients and help them find the best possible solutions to their legal problems.

Focusing on complex commercial litigation, Peter Newman represents clients in various industries, including health care, manufacturing, transportation and logistics, and financial services. While he frequently assists clients with product liability cases, contract and payment disputes, and other commercial matters, Peter has a diverse skillset that enables him to maneuver the constantly changing landscape of commercial litigation and proactively tackle new problems that may arise.

Peter is able to skillfully navigate evolving variables that arise in litigation, and knows how to creatively advance his clients' positions through written and oral advocacy. He is deeply committed to listening to his clients and honoring their goals throughout the entirety of the representation. His unyielding commitment to helping his clients succeed, combined with his skilled and accomplished problem-solving, allows Peter to put each of his client's situations into a unique perspective to help them achieve maximum success.
