Growing up, I spent quality time with older Americans in my parents' neighborhood grocery and volunteering in nursing homes. Making deep connections with elders comes naturally to me and is my foundation and drive for advocacy.

For over 30 years, senior care professional Sally Brewer has served with incredible compassion. Sally assists with elder law matters, including powers of attorney and advance healthcare directives — legal instruments appointing a trusted agent — as well as conservatorship proceedings, care advocacy, placement support, dementia consultation, and benefits navigation for frail adults through the Medicaid and VA systems. She is a certified dementia practitioner with three decades of experience in the long-term care industry and Alzheimer's advisory. Sally is a champion for change in Alzheimer's public policy and regularly performs educational trainings to area professionals, as well as support groups for family caregivers. She is an accomplished elder care paralegal and has devoted her career to breaking barriers, uncovering bias and ageist circumstances, finding solutions and coping mechanisms, and empowering clients to live life with dignity and secure care within their rights. As part of a seasoned team of professionals willing to take on the system, Sally provides timely, methodical, and meticulous advice. She works with compromised clients throughout northwest Georgia, Chattanooga, and 10 surrounding counties. She is devoted to justice in aging. Demonstrative of her skills, Sally has gained the confidence of the courts evidenced by court referrals of elder orphans and appointment as conservator.

While she lives and breathes the work she does, she also has a big heart for volunteering. You may catch Sally "paying it forward" in Northwest Georgia as she supports the Walker County Planetarium and the Ridgeland Panther's baseball team (where her son is the pitching coach). When she is not working, Sally regularly spends time as a family caregiver.
