

Stephany Pedigo Highlighted in HealthScope Magazine

HealthScope Magazine recently published "Leaving a Legacy: The Practicalities of Wills and Estate Planning," an article highlighting Stephany Pedigo's viewpoint, along with two other business professionals, on the importance of estate planning and taking time to properly prepare your end of life plan. Stephany describes how planning ahead is another way of taking care of your family.

Here's a snapshot from the article:

"In taking the time and effort to plan your estate, you relieve stress and show love to your family by clearly letting them know your wishes regarding healthcare directives and displaying that you planned for their financial welfare in a will or trust."

To see the full HealthScope article, read the HealthScope Spring 2023 Issue.

Stephany Pedigo is an attorney in our estate planning section. For more than 20 years, she has assisted clients in numerous estate and trust-based planning to protect their assets and provide for their families. From drafting wills, trusts, and incapacity documents to providing advice for her clients, Stephany is committed to assisting clients in a caring and responsive manner in their planning and when they face the challenging task of administering a loved one's estate. For more information on her practice and experience, visit her bio.